

New beginnings

Six years ago Tony and Terry Leos opened the doors of CCS, doing stained concrete floors. Back then CCS stood for Creative Concrete Solutions.

Today CCS is Custom Concrete Solutions. "But we kept CCS and that is primarily what our builders and our customers know us by," Tony said.

The name change in December 2009 was the result of a trademark issue, although Leos did everything by the book in registering the name.

"Since that time we have just been doing our thing. Nothing really has changed," he said.

Along with custom homes, CCS has done floors in several restaurants and hotels in San Antonio. "We pour concrete, we stamp it, we stain it and we seal it. We do overlays."

Leos is especially fond of a faux wood floor that is actually concrete, and is looking to patent the process.

CCS also has a decorative concrete store at FM3009 and IH35 North that supplies chemicals to builders and stainers in the industry.

Terry manages the offices and the company employs five people. Tony said he does not sub out their work. "Every job that is on our website I have done.

Folks feel like they are that much more important that you are not just going to hand off your work."

CCS has been featured on the Concrete Network several times displaying floor projects.

Tony is equally creative when it comes to one of his pastimes. "I like to cook in the chili cook-offs and brisket cook-offs and fajita cook-offs. Also at our church, Calvary Chapel San Antonio, we have cooked for a lot of the homeless people downtown and also for the children at the youth camps and weddings at church.

Tony and Terry also enjoy playing golf with their pastor and his wife.

"And we enjoy just hanging out with our two kids.
